Advising Today's College Student:
Connecting the DOTS

NACADA Region 6
Drive-In Workshop

February 27, 2012

Drive-In Workshop

Today's college student may be first generation, may have transfer credit, may be a veteran or perhaps works in addition to being a student. How do we as academic advisors meet these students where they are? This drive-in workshop is designed to give a professional development opportunity in our region for those who advise college students.

Charlie Nutt, NACADA Executive Director, will join us as keynote speaker to discuss the challenges and opportunities in advising today's college student. Breakout sessions will follow addressing how to connect the DOTS: Data, Outreach, Technology and Students.

Presenters will focus on the current literature and perceived advising expectations of today's college student. A student panel is planned to augment conversations regarding the characteristics of college students as emerging adults.

Other sessions will focus on the current ways advising colleagues are incorporating technology into student advising. In addition, roundtable discussions regarding outreach and some best practices to connect with students will comprise breakout sessions.

Don't miss an opportunity to grow in your professional development and to network with others who work with college students. Make plans to join us for lively discussions and exchange of ideas on Monday, February 27, 2012 from 8:00 am– 1:30 pm on the Concordia College Campus at the Knutson Campus Center (the Jones Conference Suite) in Moorhead, MN.
