Advising: Exploring Models and Enhancing Skills in Education Today.

A Regional Drive-in Conference for advisors
sponsored by NACADA and WAAC.

Friday, June 27, 2003
Lake Washington Vocation Technical College
8:30 am - 4:30 pm

This is a one-day conference designed to be relevant, professional and inspiring. This is an opportunity to connect with your community college and university colleagues around the state, gather information, share ideas and look to your counterparts for their "best practices".

KEY NOTE SPEAKER INFORMATION:

Tana Hasart is the Associate Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Director of Student Affairs at the University of Washington, Bothell. Her background in higher education first began in 1983 when she worked as an Office Assistant II in the admissions office at Pierce College in Tacoma. She has served in the student services/affairs arena for 20 years in both community colleges and the university setting. She continues to teach as an affiliate faculty member with the University of Washington and Oregon State University - believing that it keeps her balanced with respect to the holistic experiences of students as learners and information seekers.

Her philosophy with respect to advising is quite simple: "Higher education continues to prove itself as the 'great equalizer' with respect to socio/economic status. Our role is to help prospective students connect with options that they believe are in their best interest through accurate information, caring support, and ethical representation. We, as student service professionals, help teach decision making and self-management skills that students then use in the 'real world'."

CALL FOR PROPOSALS:

Do you want to be a part of this exciting conference? Please submit a proposal for a program, best practice or issue that you would like to share. We are very excited about the proposals we have received thus far. I have added the titles of the proposals we have to entice you to volunteer for a workshop/roundtable and to get you excited for the upcoming conference.
