

Rich Robbins is an Associate Dean of Arts and Sciences at Bucknell University. He received his Ph.D. in Social Psychology from the University of Nevada, Reno. Rich served as a full-time psychology/behavioral sciences faculty member for four years, followed by a move into higher education administration and adjunct teaching for the past 12 years. Rich has developed advising programs at two separate institutions and headed advising programs at four institutions, receiving the NACADA/ACT Outstanding Institutional Advising Award in 1998 and the NACADA Research Grant Award in 1999 as well as several campus advising awards. He has served as Chair of the Kansas Academic Advising Network, Chair of the NACADA Research Committee, and has been a member of numerous NACADA task forces, advisory boards, and committees. He is past member of the NACADA Journal Editorial Board and will presume the role of co-editor of the NACADA Journal in October, 2009. In addition, he has also served as chair of the NACADA Summer Institute Advisory Board for 2007 and 2008, and is a member of the NACADA Academic Advising Consultants and Speakers Service having performed consultations at ten institutions over the past seven years. Rich previously served as the elected NACADA Administrative Division Representative and member of the NACADA Council and is a current member of the NACADA Board of Directors. He was a facilitator at the first two NACADA Administrators' Institutes, co-chaired the first NACADA Assessment Seminar in 2004 and served as a faculty at the 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, and 2009 Assessment Institutes, and was a faculty member at the 2006, 2007, 2008, and 2009 NACADA Summer Institutes. Rich has over 80 presentations at professional conferences and numerous NACADA Journal book reviews and articles. In 2004 he served as editor for the NACADA monograph Giving Advice to Students: A Road Map for College Professionals, is a co-author of the 2005 NACADA CD "Guide to Assessment in Academic Advising," and has a chapter on evaluation and assessment of career advising in the forthcoming 2009 NACADA/Jossey-Bass publication Handbook of Career Advising as well as a chapter on generating scholarship from theory and previous research in the forthcoming 2010 NACADA Monograph Scholarly Inquiry in Academic Advising. Rich also serves as a manuscript reviewer for the peer-reviewed Journal of College Student Retention and regularly acts as a professional reviewer for textbooks in various areas of psychology. He is also faculty for the NACADA/KSU master's degree program in academic advising, teaching "Foundations of Academic Advising" and "Administration of Advising." Aside from academic advising, his other teaching interests include introductory psychology, health psychology, medical sociology, research methodology, and parapsychology, while his areas of emphasis in academic advising include evaluation and assessment, retention, undecided students, high-achieving students, research methodology, and grant writing. And, by the way, he is a black belt in taekwondo.
