Ebony D. Green, Ed.D.
shares her first year experience

I attended my first regional conference after working as an advisor for three years and being in higher education for six. I was shocked to learn there was an entire community with the same issues I had when dealing with students.

You would think that attending NACADA would be no big deal after being an advisor for nine years...WRONG! My first NACADA conference was just three years ago in Minneapolis. It was great, inspiring, and overwhelming all at the same time. There were a lot of people and ideas flying around and I was desperately trying to figure out where I fit in. I quickly learned that everyone at NACADA is open to learning something and sharing their experiences. I knew I had a voice but the people in the room were more experienced, polished, and quite frankly louder than me, so at first I just listened!

That conference was the beginning of my global advising connection. I met people in sessions who had similar interests from across the country, I started asking lots of questions that were important to me, and I tried to see how others ideas could impact the work I did when I returned home. I can now say that I have been a conference presenter in Vegas and writing this piece for you in Atlanta. Without attending that first NACADA conference I couldn't share this story with you...and I can't wait for your story!
