

Advising Undecided Students and Career Life Planning

Abstract

This topical session will focus on undecided or exploratory students and various reasons for their status. Specific advising theories and strategies will be addressed for working with this population. The focus of this session will be on assisting this special population of students identify and attain their academic and vocational goals, to achieve degree completion. As a result, participants will have a deeper understanding of the integration of academic and career advising in the context of NACADA's Concept for Advising.

Participants will:

- Discuss integration of advising/career offices as a shared model
- Identify current mechanisms being used to improve completion
- Review the benefits of technological advances
